Let's Start!

Let's ask for some time off!

Learning Outcome

Exchange advice and suggestions in a range of social and work contexts.

Ask your partner:

- When was the last time you asked for time off at work?
- Why did you ask for time off?

Can Do Statements

- I can ask for and respond to favors.
- I can talk about my feelings and reactions to the weather.
- I can give opinions.

Let's Explore!

Janet and Peter talk about the crazy weather. Was Peter nearly crushed by a tree?

* To "crush" means to press or squeeze so hard that something is damaged.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Janet: Hi, Peter. Would you mind coming in?
- Peter: No problem. How are you? Did you read through my proposal by any chance?
- Janet: Good, thanks. Yes and to be honest, I was pleased with it. It only needed minor adjustments.
- Peter: I'm happy that my work was satisfying. Could you possibly do me a favor?
- Janet: Just a minute Peter. Could I ask you to notify us the next time you are unable to come into work? We were worried about you.
- Peter: No problem. The storm last night was terrifying. There were fallen trees everywhere in my neighborhood. I was lucky not to have been crushed by one. I believe you must have been worried about your employees. I thought it would be understood why I wasn't in the next day.
- Janet: Did you have a close call?
- Peter: I think the whole weather situation was disturbing and frightening.
- Janet: Personally, I'm glad to hear you're okay. You had us worried.
- Peter: How did you manage to get home under the conditions?
- Janet: It was reassuring to know that the storm wasn't too damaging.
- Peter: That's amazing ... Janet, I feel exhausted after this experience. I would like to request a week off. To my mind, I'm sure I will be more productive.
- Janet: Of course, you deserve it. I know you've been wanting some time off. I reckon things are calmer now. Could you please call the office if anything unexpected comes up?
- Peter: Sure. Thank you Janet.

Let's Practice!

Aren't you glad that the storm has passed?

Learning Points

Giving Opinions

Conversations are far more interesting when people interact during the conversation. It is important to ask for others' opinions on a subject as well as giving your own.

Here are some ways you can ask for and give opinions.

Asking for Opinions	Giving Opinions
Always ask questions that encourage a response: • What do you think about ... ? • What's your position on ... ? • Where do you stand on ... ? • What do you think of ... ? • How do you feel (about ...)?	When you give opinions, make your opinions less forceful by using neutral statements: • I'm happy that ... (+clause) • I understand that ... (+clause) • For peace of mind, ... (+clause) • I believe ... (+clause) • I think ... (+clause)

Examples:

- For peace of mind, I will notify you when I can't come in.
- I believe people are worried about the working conditions.
- I think the proposal was satisfying.

Learning Points

Describing Feelings and Things

Adjectives are words used before nouns. They give information about the nouns and indicate qualities. They can also be used to describe your feelings and or things like the weather.

1. "-ing" adjectives are used to describe opinions, feelings, and things.

Examples:

- The whole experience was terrifying.
- The storm was a frightening experience.

2. "-ed" adjectives are used to describe how people feel.

Examples:

- I was terrified when the power went out.
- I was frightened by all the loud noises.

Here's a table to help you understand "-ed" and "-ing" adjectives.

feel "-ed" adjectives	describe "-ing" adjectives
pleased	pleasing
worried	worrying
exhausted	exhausting
satisfied	satisfying
horrified	horrifying
